

Bibliografia Recomendada

A literatura sobre a história financeira e monetária é vasta. Como primeira abordagem, recomendamos uma série de obras de referência que são indispensáveis para a consulta de definições de termos econômicos e financeiros, eventos chave e interpretações das principais crises financeiras:

David Glasner (ed.), Business, Cycles and Depressions: An Encyclopedia, Nova Iorque, Garland, 1997.

P. Newman, M. Milgaat, J. Eatwell, The New Palgrave Dictionary of Money and Finance, Nova Iorque, Macmillan, 1992.

S. Durlauf e L. Blume (eds.), The New Palgrave Dictionary of Economics, Nova Iorque, Macmillan, 2008, 8 vols.

Joel Mokyr (ed.), The Oxford Encyclopedia of Economic History, Nova Iorque, Oxford University Press, 2003, 5 vols.

Em um segundo momento, recomendamos a consulta a alguns sítios da Internet que também incluem informações sobre o tema. Por exemplo, é de grande utilidade o sítio da Economic History Association (Estados Unidos), EH.Net, cuja direção é <http://eh.net/>. Da mesma maneira, podem-se consultar os sítios de outras associações de história econômica. Em língua espanhola, são de especial utilidade o da Asociación Española de Historia Económica (<http://www.aehe.net/>) e o da Asociación Mexicana de Historia Económica (<http://www.economia.unam.mx/amhe/index.html>).

Para estudos históricos, uma excelente fonte é a revista Financial History Review, editada pela Cambridge University Press, que é o órgão da European Association of Banking and Financial History, que também publica numerosos livros sobre história financeira. Por sua vez, uma esplêndida coleção de monografias de história monetária e financeira é a dirigida por Michael Bordo: “Studies in Macroeconomic History”, na Cambridge University Press. Para informação sobre sítios de interesse atuais, referentes à crise contemporânea, recomendamos a página Web do Livro <http://historiadelascrisis.com/> que possui versões em espanhol e em português.

Nossa sintética seleção bibliográfica começa com algumas obras gerais sobre história financeira e monetária. A seguir, incluímos sugestões de leituras por períodos e por capítulos. As obras citadas incluem referências bibliográficas adicionais que são de consulta requerida.
